

ID

TM08_DIP_LIN

Teach Mob – Visiting Professors Academic year 2015/2016

2nd term
COURSE TITLE Phraseology from a cross-linguistic perspective
Scientific area Antiquities, Philological-Literary and Historical–Artistic Science
Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures and Modern Cultures
Language used to teach German
Course summary The course will focus on phraseology from a cross-linguistic point of view (German-Italian). The objectives are: a) to familiarise the participants with recent linguistic theories on phraseology, b) to apply theoretical approaches to lexicographical description of phraseologisms, c) to thus elaborate the linguistic profile of phraseologisms with respect to specific L2 requirements using the possibilities of digital lexicographical representation.
Learning objectives The learning objectives are: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- to familiarise the students with new and relevant theories for the description of phraseology- a critical reflexion of these theories and the practice of academic discourse in linguistics- the application of the constructionist theoretical framework to digital L2 lexicography- to sharpen students' awareness of bilingual language description and pragmatic competence in German- the use of digital language corpora for lexicographical description- practical lexicographical skills
Tutorship activities Mentoring of students' Master or doctoral thesis; development of specific theoretical or practical research issues
Other activities besides the course: i.e. seminars and conferences addressed to PhD students and research fellows, dissemination conferences Possible options are: conferences for students, collaboration with Goethe Institute's teachers and teacher training institutions.

Visiting Professor Profile Contrastive linguistics in German and Italian; research in the field of phraseology and contrastive grammar German – Italian
--

Contact person at the Department Prof.ssa Marcella Costa marcella.costa@unito.it
--