Teach Mob – Visiting Professors Academic year 2017/2018

2nd Term
COURSE TITLE Working group
Scientific area M-PI/05
Department of Psychology
Language used to teach English
Teaching Commitment: 30 hours
Course summary Historically, psychologists' work focused on discovering differences between women and men—differences that were taken as evidence of men's dominance and women's inferiority and used to deny women access to privilege and power. In the past 25 years, the feminist movement has shifted the focus to the lived experiences of women, the social construction of gender, the gendered nature of social institutions, and the way that gender intersects with ethnicity, sexual orientation, social class, health and other social dimensions. In this course, we will examine these and other themes in contemporary scholarship on the psychology of women.
Learning objectives In this class, we expect that students will learn as much from our class discussions as you do from the assigned readings. Thus, you should come to each class having read all the articles and prepared to participate actively.
Other activities besides the course: i.e. seminars and conferences addressed to PhD students and research fellows, dissemination conferences PhD Seminars on Qualitative Research Methodology- Performance Ethnography

Visiting Professor Profile Expert in social psychology and gender differences. Teaching experiences in master and PhD education. High profile in research on themes related to gender differences, discrimination and health.
